Personalised mugs or teapots

While bog standard mugs and other chinaware isn't particularly thoughtful, going to the effort to get something with a personal message or image on is and will really show your family or friends that you've made a special effort for them and their tea-drinking habits. Choose something with a funny message, or just have their name printed on a mug or cup and saucer, depending on how they like to drink their tea. If the gift is for a family of tea lovers, why not get them a personalised teapot with their surname on so they all enjoy tea together in the mornings?

Loose Leaf tea

Nothing could be more appropriate for a true tea lover than loose leaf tea, but don't opt for the traditional type, go for something different and introduce them to a flavour or type of tea they've never experienced. Silver Needle White Tea from Royal Tips is an aromatic option from the Fujian province in China, which is where white tea originally comes from. The buds of this tea are long and covered in white silky down, which gives off a subtle and refined flavour. For a stronger flavour, choose their Golden Tips Black Tea which has a robust flavour and gives off an exquisite flavour of chocolate and caramel.

Tea strainer

This accessory is an ideal gift for the discerning tea drinker who wants to make sure that all of their pots of tea are made perfectly. A tea strainer is used to catch tea leaves when loose leaf tea is being used, so you could also buy them some of that for an even better gift. You can find all sorts of tea strainers, from plain styles to much more decorative, so you're bound to find something for even the fussiest of tea drinkers.
